DISTINCTION

Procumbens Juniper
(Upright)

The fanciest and most unusual tubbed plant ever used for decorating. The foliage is heavy and compact with a grayish green color. The idea of this plant is new and the character is unique. It is as durable as the others listed here and requires no more than customary care.

Over All Height Is Five Feet.

Chinese Columnar Juniper

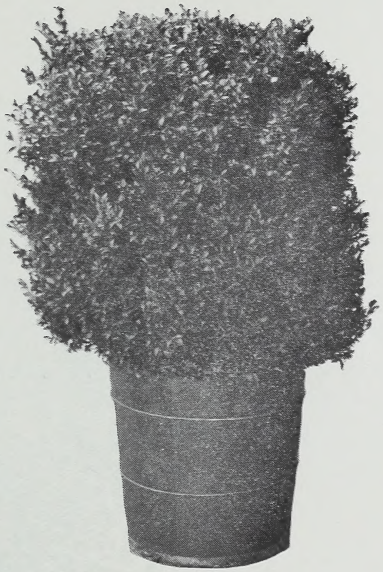
A slender tree with dark blue, cedar like leaves. It is prickly and will not be molested if used at elevators or other entrances where people often stand near them.

Over all height five and one-half feet.

Large front porches become very attractive with tubbed plants on them.

Cherry Laurel

A broadleaf evergreen. Leaves are approximately two inches long, medium green in color. The tree is somewhat similar in character to the more expensive Bay Trees. Over all height five and one-half feet.



Boxwood

The aristocratic plant. Possessing a deep green glossy foliage it is often used to portray a conservative idea in beautification. Boxwood is one of the slowest growing of all plants. Height four feet.

Even out of direct sunlight or in theatres where they are deprived of all sunlight they last an amazingly long time.

Chinese Holly

A comparatively new plant in this country. The spiny waxy leaves give it a uniqueness all its own. The plant can be obtained with or without red berries. Over all height four and a half feet.

Corridors, assembly rooms, ticket offices, registration desks, dining halls, etc. are greatly enhanced by the presence of live plants.

Meyers' Juniper

An irregular shaped plant. It is open in the center. The branches spread upward and outward. The foliage is very compact and blue in color.

Over all height three and one-half feet.

Baker Arbor Vitae

An inexpensive and well known plant. It is hardy and will stand much abuse. Foliage has a light green color and soft texture.

Over all height four feet six inches.

USE THEM IN SHOW ROOMS.

Cedrus Deodara

This plant has a delicate gray-green needle foliage. It is truly the South's most graceful tree.

Over all height five and one-half feet.

DECORATE BANQUET HALLS WITH THEM.

Magnolia

The historical tree of the South. Its head of large glossy leaves supported by a straight sturdy stem makes a handsome plant.

It is most suitable for modern architecture so often left bare.

Over all height five feet.

Containers used for plants shown are heavy wire bound wooden tubs painted a soft green.

They are durable and will give several years service.
